RUSSELL SPEAKS

DELIVERS AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION.

Mis Views on the Modern Tendeness of International Law and the Arbitration Question.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 20.-Over 4,500 people assembled in Convention Hall today to listen to the address of Lord Rus-England, on "International Law" before the American Bar Association. It was one of the most distinguished audiences that ever gathered here. When Lord Russell entered the hall he was greeted with hearty applause and as he ascended the platform the ovation increased and was more demonstrative. Besides Lord Russell States Judge Rufus W. Peckham, United States Attorney-general Harmon, New York Court of Appeals Judge Bartlett, Hon. Cortlandt T. Parker, of New Jersey; United States District Court Judge Cox; Hon. J. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia; Hon. Henry Hitchcock, of St. Louis; Hon. William Allen Butler, of New York; Hon. Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont; Hon. James C. Carter, of New York; Hon. Bishop John P. Newman, Sir Francis Lockwood and Montague Crackenthorpe. The president of the association, Moorefield Storey, of Boston, on presenting Lord no introduction to any English-speaking lawyer, but of presenting to you Lord Russell of Killowen, the Lord Chief Justice of England, who will deliver the annual ad-dress on the subject of International Lord Russell prefaced his words by a modest but handsome acknowledgement of the loving and hearty welcome with which he was honored on this occasion. His address was of great length and discussed large the sources of international law, the ethical standard to which it ought to conform, the characteristics of its modern tendencies and developments and "some lly congratulated him needful words on the question, lately so much discussed, of international arbitra-tion." In considering what characterizes he said: "In a word, it is their greater humanity. When Menclek. Emperor of Abyssinia, was recently reported to have cut off the right arms and feet of 500 prisoners the civilized world felt a thrill of horror. Yet the time was when to treat prisoners as slaves and permanently to disable them from again bearing arms belligerent capture. Such acts would once have excited no more indignation than did the inhumanities of the African slave trade before the days of Clarkson and Wilberforce. Let us hope that it is no longer possible to do as Louis XIV did in his devas-tation of the Palatinate, or to do as he threatened to do, break down the dykes and overwhelm with disaster the low countries. Let us hope, too, that no modern Napoleon would dare to decree as the first Napoleon did in his famous or infamous seront brules edict of 1810. The force of public opinion is too strong and it has reached a higher moral plane.

EVILS OF WAR MITIGATED. "A bare recital of some of the important respects in which the evils of war have been mitigated by more humane customs must suffice. Among them are (1) the greater immunity from attack of the persons and property of enemy subjects in a hostile country; (2) the restrictions imposed on the active operations of a belligerent when occupying an enemy's country; (3) the recognized distinction between subjects of the enemy, combatant and noncombatant; (4) the deference accorded to cartels, safe conduets and flag of truce; (5) the protection secured for ambulances and hospitals and for all engaged in tending the sick and wounded-of which the Geneva Red Cross convention of 1864 is a notable illustration; (6) the condemnation of the use of instruments of warfare which cause needless suffering.

"In this field of humane work the United When the States took a prominent part. When the civil war broke out President Lincoln was prompt in intrusting to Prof. Franz Lieber the duty of preparing a manual of system-atized rules for the conduct of forces in the field-rules aimed at the prevention of those scenes of cruelty and rapine which were formerly a disgrace to humanity. That manual has, I believe, been utflized by the governments of England, France

"Even more important are the changes wrought in the position of neutrals in war times, who, while bound by strict obligations of neutrality, are in great measure left free and unrestricted in the pursuit of peaceful trade. But in spite of all this, who can say that these times breathe the spirit of peace? There is a war in the air. Nations armed to the teeth prate of peace, but there is no sense of peare. One sovereign burdens the industry of his people to maintain military and naval armament at war strength, and his neighbor does the like and justifies it by the example of the other; and England, insular though she be, with her imperial interests scattered the world over, follows, or is forced to follow, in the wake. If there be no war there is at best an armed peace. Figures are appalling. I take those for 1895. In Austria the annual cost of army and navy was, in round figures. £18,000,000; in France £37,000,000, in Germany £27,000,000, in Great Britain £36,000,000, in Italy £13,000,000 and "The significance of these figures is increased if we compare them with those of former times. The normal cost of the armaments of war has of late years enormously increased. The annual interest on the public debt of the great powers is a war tax. Behind this array of facts stands a tragic figure. It tells a dismal tale. It speaks of overburdened industries, of waste of human energy unprofitably engaged, of the squandering of treasure which might have let light into many lives, of nes made desolate, and all this too often without recompense in the thought that these sacrifices have been made for the ove of country or to preserve national honor or for national safety. When will governments learn the lesson that wisdom and justice in policy are a stronger secur-ity than weight of armament?"

n Russia £52,000,000.

CIVILIZATION DEFINED. After treating the question of arbitration at length, Lord Russell concluded as

"In dealing with the subject of arbitration I have thought it right to sound a note of caution, but it would, indeed, be a reproach to our nineteen centuries of Christian civilization if there were now no better method of settling international differences than the cruel and debasing methods of war. May we not hope that the pple of these States and the people of the mother land-kindred peoples-may in this matter set an example of lasting influence to the world? We boast of our advance and often look back with pitying contempt on the ways and manners of generations gone by. Are we ourselves with-out reproach? Has our civilization borne the true marks? Must it not be said, as has been said of religion itself, that countless crimes have been committed in its name? Probably it was inevitable that the weaker races should in the end succumb. but have we always treated them with consideration and with justice. Has not civilization too often been presented to them at the point of the bayonet and the Bible by the hand of the filibuster? And apart from races we deem barbarous is and power accountable for the worst chapters of cruelty and oppression written in the world's history? Few peoples-perhaps none—are free from this reproach.

"What indeed is true civilization? By its fruit you shall know it. It is not dominion, wealth, material luxury; nay, not even a great literature and education widespread -good though these things be. Civilization is not a veneer; it must penetrate to the very heart and core of societies of men. Its true signs are thought for the poor and suffering, chivalrous regard and respect for woman, the frank recognition of human brotherhood, irrespective of race or color or nation or religion, the love of ordered freedom, abhorrence of what is mean and cruel and vile, ceaseless devotion to the claims of justice. Civilization in that, its true, its highest sense, must make for peace. We have solid grounds for faith in the future. Government is becoming more and more, but in no narrow class sense. sell of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice of for the people. Populations are no longer moved and maneuvered as the arbitrary will or restless ambition or caprice of kings or potentates may dictate. And although democracy is subject to violent gusts of passion and prejudice, they are gusts only. The abiding sentiment of the masses is for peace-for peace to live industrious lives and to be at rest with all mankind. With the prophet of old they feel-though the feeling may find no articulate utterance-how beautiful upon the mountains there were grouped on the platform United | are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace

Mr. President, I began by speaking of the two great divisions-American and British-of that English speaking world which you and I represent to-day, and with more reference to them I end. Who can doubt the influence they possess for insuring the healthy progress and the peace of mankind? But if this influence is to be feit they must work together in cordial friendship, each people in its own sphere of action. If they have great power hey have also great responsibility. No cause they espouse can fail; no cause they oppose can triumph. The future is in large part theirs. They have the making of history in the times that are to come. The greatest calamity that could befall would be strife which should divide them. Let us pray that this shall never be. Let us pray that they, always self-respecting, each in henor upholding its own flag, safeguarding its own heritage of right and respecting the rights of others, each in its own way fulfilling its high national destiny, shall yet work in harmony for the progress and the peace of the world." THANKS FOR HIS LORDSHIP. At the close of Lord Russell's address the vast audience rose to its feet and applauded and cheered him to the echo. The demonaddress. On motion of Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont, seconded by Jas. S. Carter, of the later tendencies of international law, New York, the thanks of the association were extended to Lord Russell for his eloquent address. Gen. E. F. Bullard, of New York, offered the following, which was "Resolved, That the American Bar Asso-

Its body head was fully developed, the face bearing all the marks of an old man. The head was covered with coarse hair and on the face was a straggling beard. Dr. Ranfectly developed in every way, all of the bones being hard and brittle, as with the case of people of advanced years. He did not have a good opportunity to study the case, as his attention had not been called to it until after the evolution was com-plete. During the time he was watching it, however, he searched in vain for a parallel case. All of the medical works he could find gave him absolutely nothing of a similar nature and the physician has merely let the matter pass as one of the many strange freaks of nature.

CROW OUTTALKS PARROT. Novel Match Decided by William

Poe's Rushville Neighbors.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 20.-A talking match between a crow and a parrot was the nevel entertainment enjoyed by residents on North Morgan street the other day. William Poe, the jeweler, has a tame crow that is gifted with a limited knowledge of the Queen's English. The few words it knows, however, it can rattle off with surprising accuracy. It can say "Hello, Bill!" "How's the weather?" "Fine day, boys!" "When do we chew?" and one or two other expressions with such distinctness that the crow is a favorite in the neighborhood. The other day a vender of parrots came past Mr. Poe's. He stepped inside and Mr. Poe offered $25 for a parrot that could talk as well as the crow. The parrot vender put up a small wager that he had a bird that could outtalk Mr. Poe's crow. The neighbors were called in as judges, and instructed that clearness, dis-tinctness and accuracy of expression were to be considered, together with extent of vecabulary.

The parrot had a balf dozen set phrases, among others, "Polly wants 16 to 1," and 'Oh, see my new shoes!" which it repeated in its best form. But the crow completely overshadowed the parret when it made its little speech. The jalges were unanimous in favor of the crow, and it unable was the general opinion that he had with days. ease defeated the gaudy parrot.

DIDN'T HOLD UP HIS HANDS. Instead, He Shot Two Burglars Who

BEDFORD STATION, N. Y., Aug. 20 .-

Walker B. Adams, of this place, is lying at the point of death as a result of an encounter with four burgiars. Two of the burglars were captured, having first been wounded by Adams's son William, who was himself strucks by a bullet, which, however, glanced off from a suspender buckle. Adams's store is provided with a burglar alarm connected with his house. Shortly after midnight the alarm sounded and Adams and his son, arming them-selves, went to the store. There they were met by four burglars, who at once opened fire. The elder Adams was shot in the head and he fell to the ground. The son was commanded by the burglars to throw up his hands. He made a move as if he intended to comply with the command, when he suddenly raised his Winchester and fired in rapid succession, wounding two of the burglars, who fell within a few feet Adams continued to fire and the two burglars emptied their revolvers at him. One of the bullets struck the buckle of William's suspender and then glanced off. Both the wounded burglars were shot in the abdomen and neither of them can recover. They refuse to say anything as to their identity. The elder Adams cannot survive his wounds. William Adams says he is confident that he wounded two of the burglars who escaped.

CAUSED BY POLITICS.

Dissolution of the Law Firm of Dickinson, Thurber & Stevenson,

DETROIT, Aug. 20 .- A dissolution of the legal copartnership of Don M. Dickinson, H. T. Thurber and Elliott G. Stevenson is announced to take place on Sept. 1. The announcement is of interest not only as involving a change in the relations of gentlemen who are recognized as standing among the foremost at the bar in Michigan, but as possessing great political significance. In fact the dissolution of a firm which includes Mr. Dickinson, one of the advisers to the President, Mr. Thurber, private secretary at the executive mansion, and Elliott G. Stevenson, chairman for some time of the Democratic State central committee, could scarcely be consummated without involving political significance. Mr. Dickinson is said to have been much displeased when he returned from the East and found that Mr. Stevenson had, to some extent, compromised the firm by accepting the chairmannhip of the state central committee and becoming responsible for the Bryan campaign in Michigan. Mr. Stevenson later resigned the chairmanship, but the friction, which, however, never interrupted amicable relations in personal intercourse, continued, and the result was the decision on Mr. Stevenson's part to withdraw from the firm.
